The bald eagle isn't really bald. It has dark brown and white feathers.

The bald eagle has a hooked yellow beak and large talons.

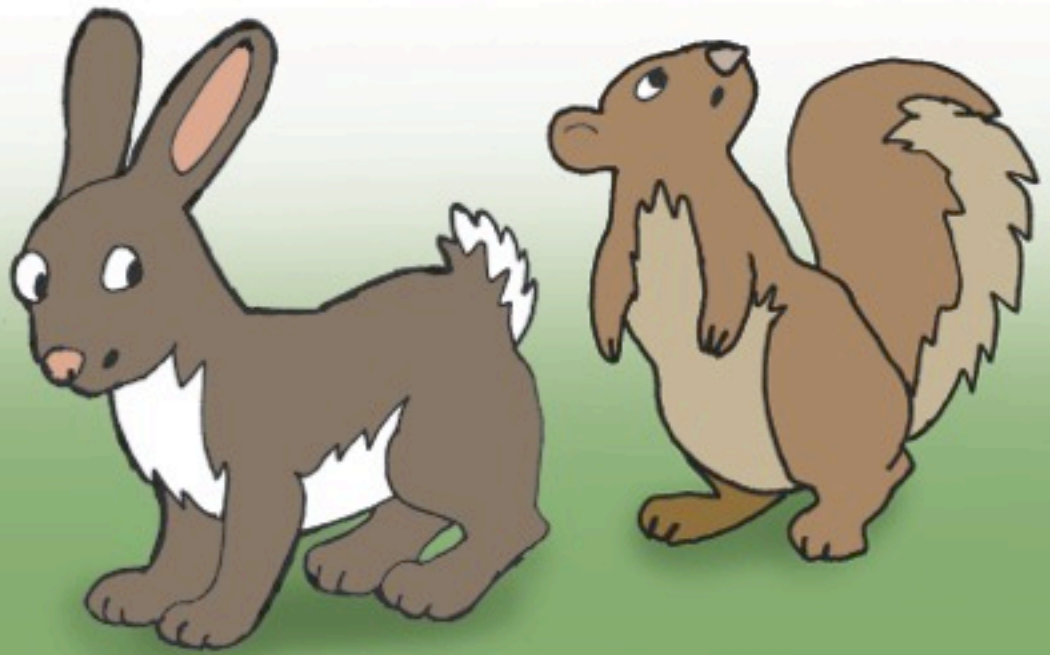

The bald eagle likes to catch and eat fish from lakes and rivers.

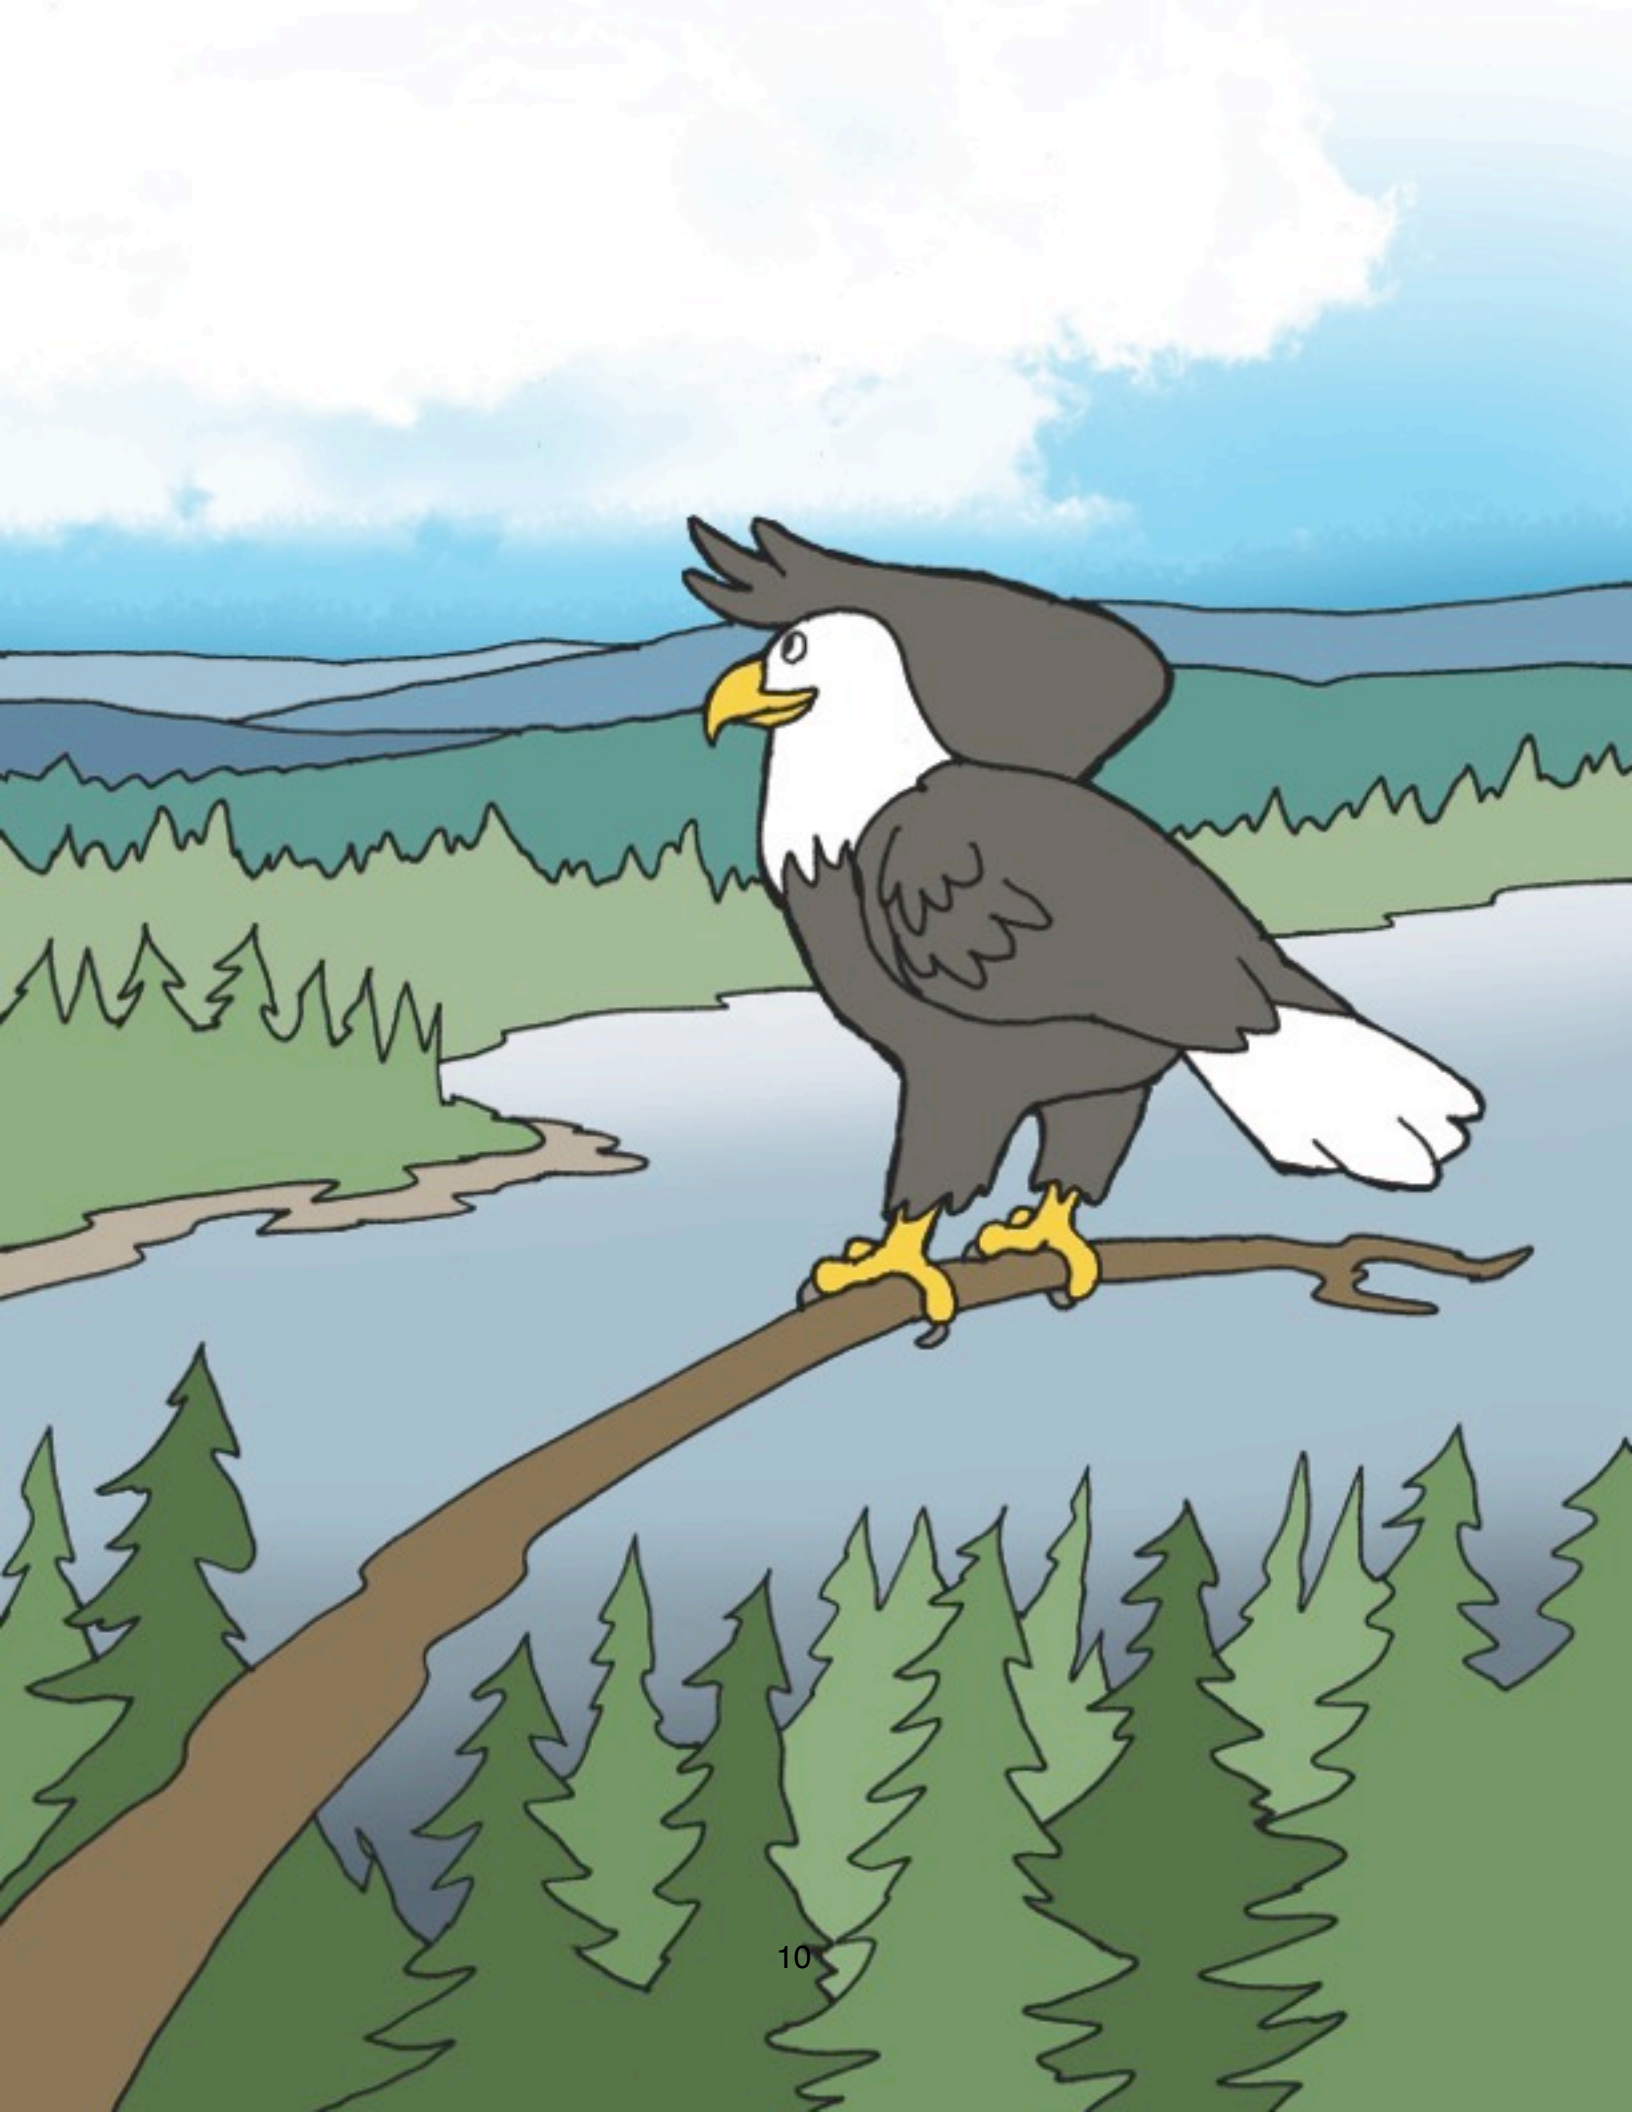

A bald eagle will also eat rabbits, squirrels and other birds!

The eyes of an eagle can see four to seven times farther than ours!

Bald eagles live in forests,
near large bodies of water.

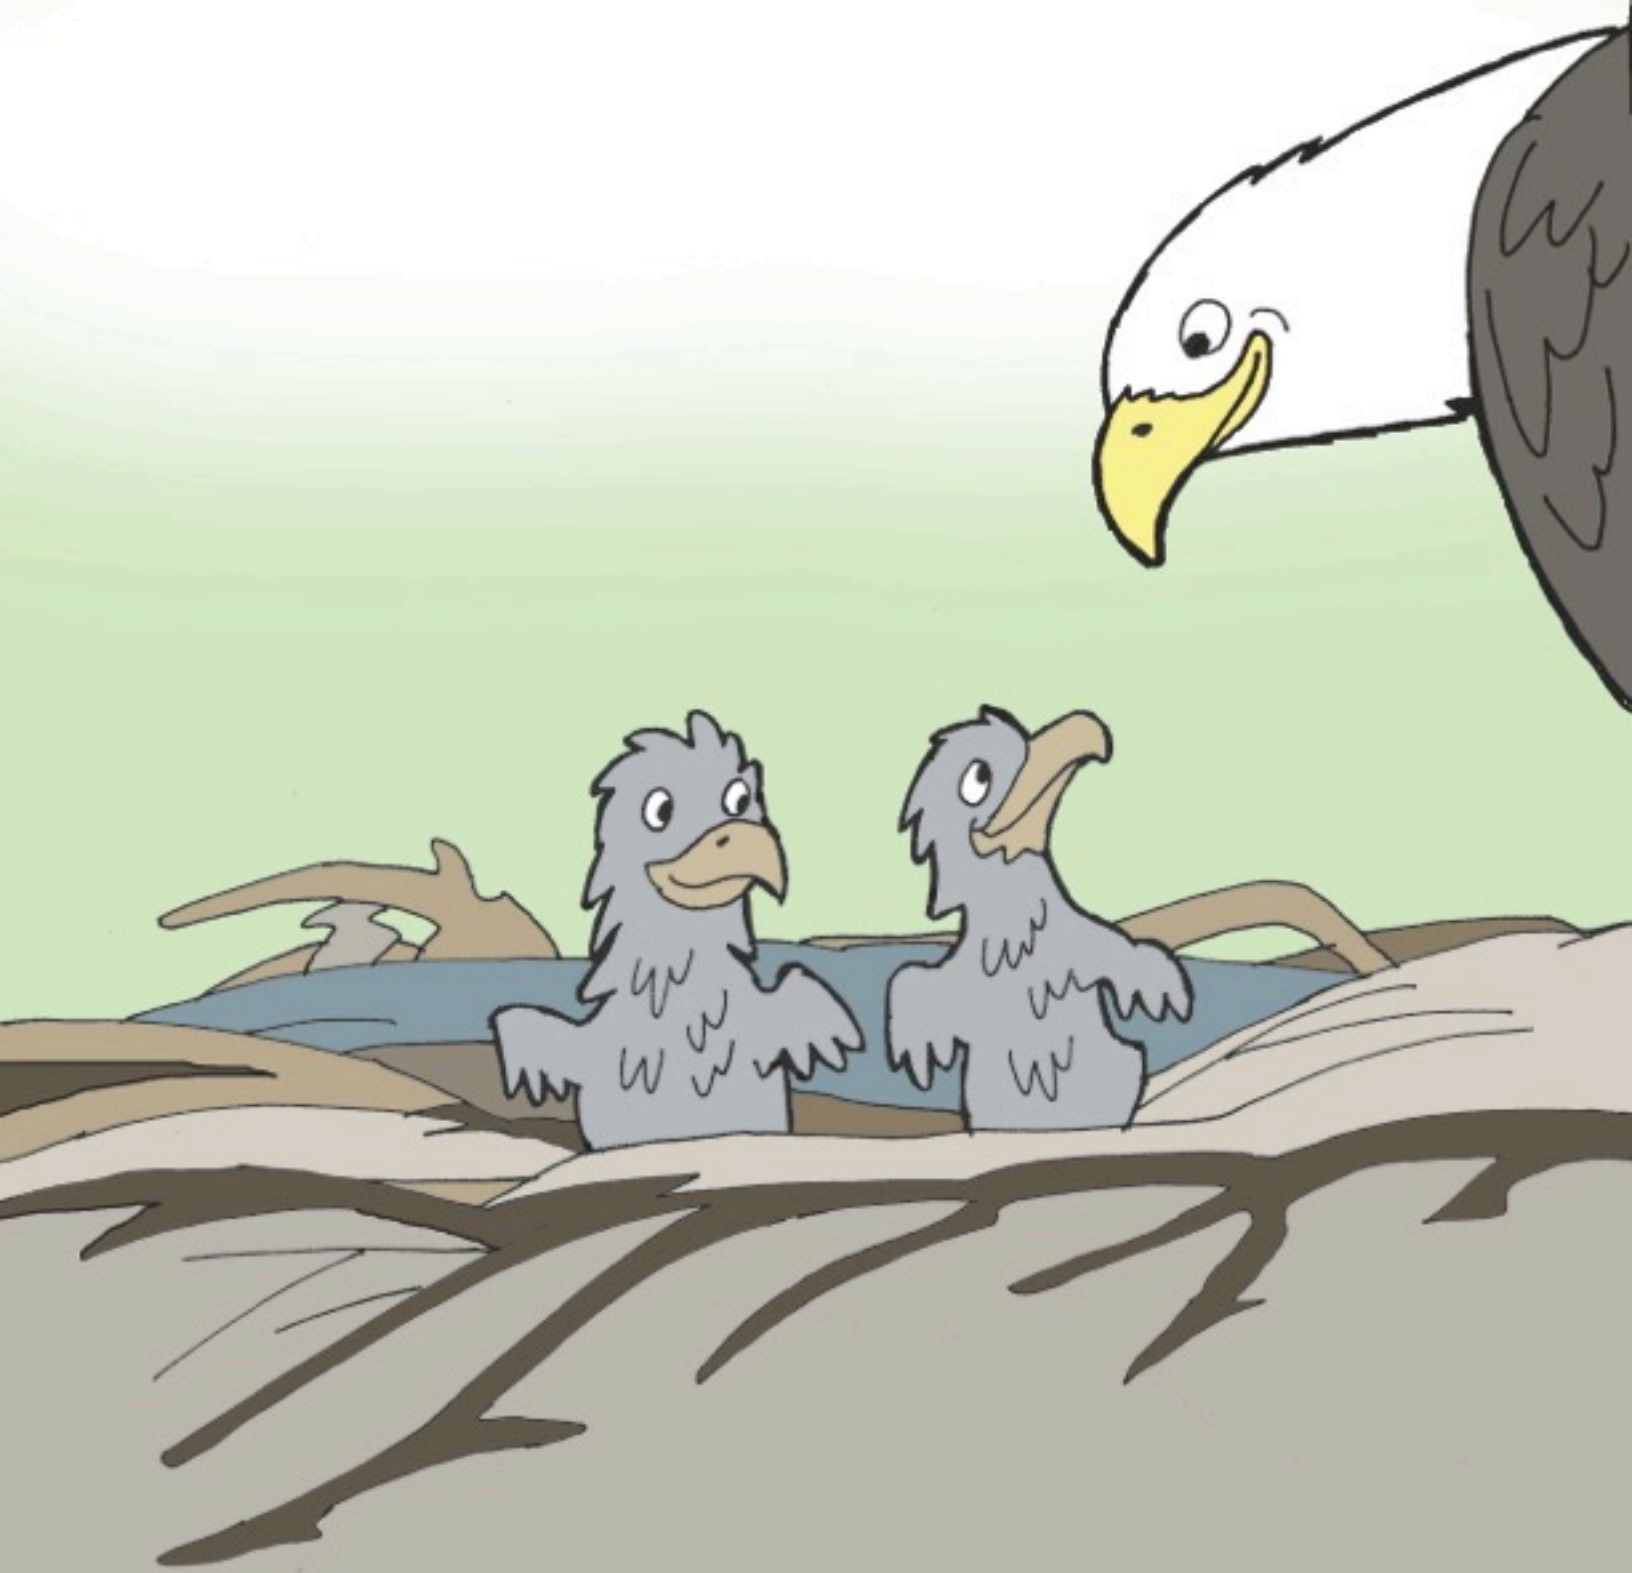

Bald eagles like to build nests
at the tops of large trees.

Baby eagles are called eaglets.
They are light gray and fluffy.

When they are twelve weeks old, it is time to leave the nest.

Bald eagles choose one mate
and stay together for life.

Female bald eagles are much larger than males.

They dance, with locked talons,
cart-wheeling through the air.

The bald eagle is special and is respected by First Nations people.
